

LIVING HISTORY RULES

In order to ensure the continued progress of The Friends of Camp Floyd Living History Group, the following list of standard rules and regulations must be observed.

- We will work to foster an attitude of teamwork and cooperation. If you have difficulties working in groups and following rules, the living history or volunteer programs may not be suited to you. In the eras that are portrayed, there were groups and individuals that did not work well in structured situations. While we may portray individuals and groups of this nature, we will do so in a cooperative manner. Role playing under these rules is one thing, actually having such an attitude is another and shall be considered unacceptable.
- All behavior is to be "family" friendly. No actions or behavior that is not fit for all ages is unacceptable.
- Group members are responsible for the members of their family including minor children. Members who bring minors to the site are responsible for their charges at all times and must sign the appropriate forms for participation.
- The public and other living history participants do not come to the site to listen to debates or expositions about current politics, religion, or recent history. Limit your conversations to subjects relevant to the resources associated with the history of the site.
  - On That Note: Non-Political Affiliation - The Friends of Camp Floyd Group is an organization made up of Living Historians who voluntarily participate for the purpose of educating the public about the history, culture, and the people who lived during the period of Camp Floyd and Johnston's Army. Friends of Camp Floyd does not endorse modern political candidates, nor does it take any political position on any modern political issues of the modern period.
- Members shall respect the belongings of others.
